

THE HALL-MILLS CASE

A DAILY PICTURE STORY OF
THE MYSTERIOUS JERSEY TRAGEDYWATCH FOR TOMORROW'S INSTALLMENT

Stoical as ever, James Mills went to the impromptu morgue in New Brunswick and looked into the water-soaked coffin to identify his wife.

To the children attending this public school, James Mills always has been an enigma, pleasant, stolid and care free, going about his duties as janitor without enthusiasm or ardor, doing his work and no more.

At night he goes home to his broken family ring, where he sits and talks to his two children—a son and daughter—a home draped in sorrow since that night four years ago when the wife and mother walked out to her death.

It was to this house that Mrs. Mills went to answer a telephone, to receive the message of mysterious death which lured her from her own fireside and sent her hurrying to the old Phillips Farm.

'Pig Woman' Backed by 'Spooner'

Q. Did you hear any noise before you went to bed coming from the Hall garage? A. No.

Bennet's testimony that he saw only a dim light in the Hall home—the light that always burned there at 2.30 a. m. on September 15, backed up earlier testimony of Phillips, the night watchman.

The state sought to have both men prove that the house at the time was brilliantly lighted.

Q. When you came down and found Phillips pinned up against a fence by your dog, did you see a woman entering the Hall home? A. No.

Q. Do you remember telling a man named Cosgrove, or Coakley, that you saw a car come out of the Hall garage so rapidly it ran into something and smashed a mud guard? A. No.

Court adjourned for noon recess with Bennett on the stand.

Simpson's first question as court reconvened was, "Is Gorsline here?" There was a delay as detectives hunted for the gaunt vestryman and William Garvin, his accuser.

Garvin, private detective to whom Gorsline is said to have told his story of the murder night, was called by Simpson. Garvin said he was a former manager of the Burns Agency's New York office.

He is now operating as a detective for several New York mercantile firms, Garvin told the court.

"Ralph Gorsline came to me about three weeks after the murders," Garvin said, before he was interrupted by McCarter's objection.

When Garvin satisfied McCarter that the man he mentioned was the Ralph V. N. Gorsline connected with the trial, Simpson examined his witness.

Q. On October 1, 1922, at Burns Agency in New York, did you see him? A. Yes, I did. He came to me about three weeks after the murders, before he was interrupted by McCarter's objection.

There still was no sign of the vestryman in the courtroom as Garvin made his accusation. Simpson looked about for him with angry impatience.

McCarter took the witness for cross-examination.

Q. Are you the man who is commonly known as "Greasy Vest?" Simpson objected to the query, silencing Garvin, who wanted to answer.

Q. Do you remember being in

New Brunswick in 1922? A. Yes.

Q. When did you meet Gorsline? A. When he came to see me.

Q. Is that the first time you met him? A. Yes.

Q. He came to you a perfect stranger? A. Yes.

Q. Were you alone? A. He wanted to be alone.

Q. How did you know the name of the man? A. I didn't know the name. He would not give me the name.

Q. The next time, a few months ago, you came to New Brunswick? A. I did.

Q. Why did you come to New Brunswick? A. To meet Inspector Underwood.

Gorsline entered the courtroom at this time but his accuser was so absorbed in answering Mr. McCarter's question that he did not notice the vestryman.

Gorsline sat with downcast eyes in the back of the courtroom. He looked at Garvin only once as he entered.

Q. You sought the appointment. A. I did not. Capt. Torpey came to me. I met him in the Hotel Astor lobby. That was several weeks ago.

Q. You were alone? A. No. an agent named McDonough was with me.

Q. When you, McDonough and Torpey met, was McDonough there as a representative of the Burns agency? A. No, he came there as a friend of Torpey's to introduce me to Torpey.

Q. Where is Capt. Torpey? A. I have no knowledge of him.

Q. You have seen him since? A. Yes, in New Brunswick, two or three weeks ago. The day the grand jury met.

Garvin did not appear before the grand jury, he said in answer to McCarter's questioning.

Q. Whom did you see in New Brunswick? A. Torpey and Lieut. Cieuch.

He was obviously ill at ease under McCarter's grilling. He slumped in the witness chair and tugged at the sleeves of a shabby black ulster.

Q. Do you know how Lieut. Cieuch met you? A. He phoned me one night at my house in Brooklyn. He made an appointment for next day.

Q. Well, when you got to New Brunswick, what did you do? A. We had lunch in a place opposite the station, then we went to the factory, the Reckett's Blue factory.

Q. What did you do there? A. Somebody there pointed out Gorsline to me.

Q. Did Cieuch go in with you? A. He went in ahead of me. As he went up the stairs he beckoned to me to follow.

'Peaches' to Begin
Battle for 'Rights'
In Court Thursday

The actual court battle between Frances (Peaches) Heenan Browning and her millionaire husband, Edward West Browning, will start Thursday in Special Term of Supreme Court at White Plains, N. Y., according to Epstein & Smith of 11 Broadway, attorneys for Peaches.

They will apply for temporary alimony and counsel fees there, and will file affidavits in regard to Browning's alleged treatment of his child wife and the answer to his suit for separation, filed recently at Carmel, Putnam county, N. Y.

The notice of application was filed by mail in White Plains today. The only information it contained was the name of the wealthy real estate operator as plaintiff.

Asked Guardian

Browning started the legal action several weeks ago in Poughkeepsie, N. Y., when he asked Supreme Court Justice Morschauser to appoint a guardian-at-law for Peaches so that he might sue her for separation. His attorneys are Tompkins & Dale, Francis C. Dale, junior member of the firm, has been acting as his personal adviser.

Notice of the pending application and the answer to Browning's suit have been served on Dale, it was said at the offices of the Heenan lawyers.
